NEW LIGHT ON HEINZE LOANS

MOTION TO DISMISS CHARGE OF OVERCERTIFICATION.

Court to Hear Arguments on That Feature of the Case—Collateral to Protect the Otto Heinze Checks Reached Bank Two Hours After They Were Brawn.

After evidence had been brought out at the trial of F. Augustus Heinze in the nited States Circuit Court yesterday howing that not over two hours elapsed etween the time that checks of the firm of Otto Heinze & Co. had been overcerof Otto Heinze & Co. had been overcertified and the time in which more than enough to meet them had been credited to the firm on October 14, 1907, ex-Judge Wallace of the Heinze counsel asked the court to diamiss the entire charge of overcertification against Heinze.

"On the evidence thus far produced by the Government," said Judge Wallace.

"there is not a shadow of ground on which the defendant can be held for over certification, and it seems that the Districtcation, and it seems that the District-Actorney has completed his evidence on Judge Hough, who is conducting the trial, said that he would listen to arguments on this motion Monday morning, when the trial is to be resumed, and Heinze and his lawyers seemed to be greatly sleased. On Monday morning there is do to be argued the question of admitting at this point the history of the pools in United Copper beginning back in 1905. which the Government started to bring out yesterday against the objections of eze lawyers, who contend that inasmuch as Mr. Heinze was not a member elf of any pool in that stock when he was president of the Mercantile Na-tional Bank and at the time covered by the indictment, this line of testimony is that the United Copper pools beginning in 1908 and continuing until the October panic of 1907 furnished the explanation for the acts of overcertification and miscation of the bank's funds comapplication of the bank's funds com-plained of in the indictment. Should the Court throw out the charge of overcation there would remain only the charge that Heinze, in directing certain loans to be made to his, associates misapplied the bank's funds.

Heinze and his friends seemed to be pleased with the points thus far made by the defence, and the party was a merry one. Back of Heinze yesterday sat his two brothers, Otto and Arthur P. their wives and Heinze's sister. The en of the party followed the evidence closely, even though it led into the domain of financial and technical banking. There was something of a stir in the afternoon in the party when the Government suddenly called Otto Heinze as a witness and it was found that he wasn't present Court had to be adjourned while hunt was made for him. His wife, quite agitated, rushed to the public telephones and finally got he, husband, was appeared breathless shortly thereafter.

On the stand yesterday Miles M. O'Brien denied flatly that he was responsible for the loans made to Heinze's associates, as the defence had made it appear on the previous day. The loan, he said, that he had had anything to do with was the first one made to the firm of Otto Heinze & Co. on March 14, 1907, for $150,000. It appeared that the board of directors held a meeting in August after the Comptroller of the Currency had complained of the loans of the bank, and there was offered in evidence a statement of the outstanding loans of August 5, 1907, which was presented at the board meeting. This statement included the following loans:

The charge of overcertification is confined to October 14, 1997, and at 2:55 o'clock, according to W. M. Panghorn, the paying teller, the amount of checks certified for the firm of Otto Heinze & Co. was about $450,000. Then a check drawn of E. F. Haston & Co. for $25,287 came.

in. In the meantime it appeared from the testimony F. A. Heinze had made a note himself, on which was loaned $400,-000, which he turned over to the credit of his brother's firm.

The paying teller said that when the last check came in and it appeared that the amount of the check certified had more than exhausted this credit, he went with Vice-President O'Srien to Heinze's door. Mr. O'Brien went inside and then came out and said that another loan for $100,000 had been made, and the last check was then certified. This was just before the close of the bank, at 3 o'clock. According to Adam Kepplar, the bookkeeper, however, the $500,000 credit on the two loans made by F. A. Heinze and indorsed over to his brother's firm was not posted on the books until nearly 4 o'clock. He thought it might have been a little later.

The next day, Mr. O'Brien said he went down to get the collateral at Heinze's office but found that the collateral had been taken to the bank the day the loan had been made and that it was in charge of the assistant cashier. From the testimony of the assistant cashier it appeared that George Baglin, Heinze's private secretary, had turned up at the bank late that afternoon with a bag full of valuables, as he explained it, and asked the witness to keep them over night in a safe place. He did not know until the next day, however, the' this bag contained the securities off-red as collateral. It is the contention of the defence that the bank was in possession practically from the time of the making of the loan and that the loan was therefore amply Heinze's connection with the market operations in United Copper while he was acting as president of the Mercantile Bank the Government put on the stand Max H. Schultze, one of the partners of the firm of Otto Heinze & Co., who is alleged to have been the manager of the pool in United Copper. He identified the following letter, dated June 12, 1907, which he had written to Mr. Heinze as president of the bank:

As I informed you over the telepho I have taken on yesterday 900 shares of United Copper and this morning 150 shares on a cable from Paris. I request that you let me have $60,000 against 1,000 shares of United Copper, which I will return before the 20th, as I have engaged credit in Paris. Please let me know at once.

let me have $60,000 against 1,000 shares of United Copper, which I will return before the 20th, as I have engaged credit in Paris. Please let me know at once.

This loan was made that same day and paid back on the 20th.

What went on in the Mercantile's board after the Heinze interests took control of the Mercantile and the big loans to the Heinze, Morse and Thomas interests began was touched on in the testimony of two of the directors, who were called in the afternoon. One of those, Dick S. Ramasy, president of the East River Savings Bank, said that upon Heinze's return from a visit to Hot Springs, Ark., in Apri. 1907, he went to him and told him that the bank had been running hehind its reserve almost continuously for twenty-five days and that he thought it ought to be made good at once. Continuing he said:

"Mr. O. F. Thomas then made a proposition that each member of either the executive committee or the hoard of directors contribute $50,000 apiece to the reserve fund. When this proposition came to me I declined. E. R. Thomas then asked me what suggestion I had to make. I said if the call loan horrowers, of which he was one of the largest, should pay their debts sheer would be no necessity for such a proposition."

Among the largest borrowers as he recollected at that time were E. R. Thomas, Maclay & Co., the Thomas brokers and Otto Heinze & Co.

William Skinner, the other director, said that in August he remembered a talk at which it was suggested that to help the bank out of its difficuities the smaller depositors should pay up their indebtedness. By this class he meant, he said, the commercial depositors. This suggestion, he said.

The last witness of the day was Otto Heinze, and one of the first questions Mr. Wise had it ask that the witness as firm "I took three men to carry in all the books of the firm. Mr. Heinze looked them over and then said that the private ledger showing the private accounts of the members of his firm was. He said he did not, but he thaught that Mr. Wise had it.

Taking up then the United Copper pool. Mr. Wise asked him if there was any agreement regarding United Copper in 1905. The witness said that there was such an agreement between Arthur P. Heinze, Otto Heinze & Co., Max Schultze and F. Augustus Heinze. "That agreement was, he said, "that we should protect the interests of our stockholders, our company and ourselves. We were to buy United Copper stock. Our credit and the credit of our company had been constantly attacked by the Standard Oil Company and its interests. Our stockholders had been forced down in the market. We were to buy the stock had been forced down in the market. We were to buy the stock had been forced down in the market. may have another chance at opera.

According to a telegram received yesterday from Baltimore it is expected that Bernard Ulrich, manager of the Chicago opera company and last year manager of the Lyric Theatre in Baltimore, will return to Baltimore next year at the close of the Chicago season and direct the ten performances which the company will give. It will be an easy matter for the company to go from Philadelphia to Baltimore and it is thought that ten representations of opera at the Lyric Theatre there will prove highly profitable.

The attitude of the directors of the Met-The attitude of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company and its allied organization for the future is that there could not have been a worse operatic season than that which has just come to an end. They are confident that better results will be a leved next winter.

Operatic extension will therefore be just as widespread next season as it was this year. Chicago will have its own opera, and Battimore will get its performances from Philadelphia. New York will also have Boston and Philadelphia to draw on in case of emergency. The eyes of the promoters of the merger are now fixed on such remote places as

Eighteen candidates were in the field from which six were chosen. W. Murray Lee, '11, pitcher of the varsity baseball team for three successive seasons and guard on last winter's victorious basketballteam, headed the list of successful candidates with 414 votes out of a total of 727. The five other men who were elected were: G. J. Dwyer, '11; W. Kinney, '11; A Mendelsohn, '11; S. Pitt, '11, and

A. McKeown, Jr. The students showed their preference for athletes of prominence, for in spite of the fact that a strong fight was made by the literary and debating element every one of the winners is a member of some varsity team. The chief orator among the students, Dixon R. Fox, who recently won the Curtis medal for exellence in public speaking, was snowed under by the men of muscle. By a two-thirds vote the students adopted a scheme for restricting the number of offices that may be held by one student during the college year. Here-after it will be impossible for the man who is seeking honors of that kind to be captain or manager of more than one varsity team or to hold a place as leader in more than two of the various non-athletic activities.
